

Conceptually, we can consider QueryLog a weak entity because it exists only when a User issues a query. However, it is technically a strong entity due to the primary key (query_id), which simplifies managing multiple queries per user and associating each query with multiple retrieved products.